Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

15 (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

- 20 5. Claims 1-6, 16, 20-22 and 40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Adobe Acrobat 5.0 released 12 March 2001 as evidenced by "Adobe Acrobat 5.0 User's Guide for Chambers" in view of Kobata et al. (US 20020077985) and further in view of Yasuda (US 20020052981).

As per claims 1, 16, and 40, Adobe discloses the functionality for a method for 25 restricting use of a clipboard application by a method, the method comprising: receiving a copy selection associated with designated content of a source file being displayed by a first source application (see page 17 where Acrobat is the first application); b) determining whether the source file is a secured file (see page 28, where requiring a password to access a document makes it secure and the determining step must be performed in order to know whether to ask for a password), where the secured file cannot be accessed without a priori knowledge (see pages 28 and 29 where the password is required to access the file); c) preventing copying of content (see pages 28 and 29 where the check box for "No Content Copying or Extraction, Disable Accessibility" prevents the copying); Adobe further discloses the ability for copying from Acrobat and pasting to a second destination application (see pages 17 and 18 where WordPerfect is the destination application).

Adobe fails to explicitly disclose preventing subsequent usage of the designated content in a second destination application via the clipboard application when the determining determines that the source file is a secured file and storing the designated content to the clipboard application prior to determining whether the designated content can be used.

However, Kobata et al. teaches preventing cut/paste (i.e. clipboard) operations from being used to copy a protected document into another application (see paragraph [0222]) and Yasuda teaches receiving a copy command, storing the designated content and then determining whether the content can be used (see FIG. 9 and paragraphs [0134]-[0141]).

At the time of the invention it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to use the Kobata et al. method of preventing clipboard operations for secure documents to prevent copying from a secured PDF to an unsecured Word perfect document and to receiving a copy command, storing the designated content and then determining whether the content can be used.

Motivation to do so would have been to allow for carefully controlled and 5 managed distribution of digital content (see Kobata et al. paragraph [0222]) and to allow a system manager to decide when content can be copied or not copied (see Yasuda paragraph [0130]).

As per claims 2-4, the modified Adobe, Kobata et al. and Yasuda system discloses receiving a copy and paste selection to provide the designated content to the 10 destination application (see Adobe pages 17 and 18, numerals 1-6).

As per claims 5-6 and 21-22, the modified Adobe, Kobata et al. and Yasuda system discloses said determining operates to determine that the source file is a secured file based on security information provided by the source application (see Adobe pages 28-30).

15 As per claim 20, the modified Adobe, Kobata et al. and Yasuda system discloses permitting storage of the designated content to the clipboard application when the determining determines that the source file is not a secured file (see Adobe pages 17 and 18).

6. Claims 10-12 and 17-19 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable 20 over the modified Adobe, Kobata et al. and Yasuda system as applied to claims 1 and 16 above, and further in view of Blank et al. (US 20030037253).

As per claims 10, 17, and 18, the modified Adobe, Kobata et al. and Yasuda system discloses clearing the content of the clipboard (see Yasuda FIG. 9 and paragraphs [0134]-[0141]) but fails to explicitly disclose storing alternate content to the clipboard application in place of the designated content when said determining 5 determines that the source file is a secured file.

However, Blank et al. teaches replacing information on a clipboard with alternative predetermined content when the file is a secure file (see paragraphs [0046] and [0032]).

At the time of the invention it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary 10 skill in the art to store alternate content in the clipboard when the source file is the secure file of the modified Adobe, Kobata et al. and Yasuda system.

Motivation to do so would have been control the degree of access the public has to data (see paragraph [0007]).

As per claims 11-12 and 19, the modified Adobe, Kobata et al., Yasuda and 15 Blank et al. system discloses storing the designated content to the clipboard application when said determining determines that the source file is not a secured file (see Adobe pages 17 and 18).

Response to Arguments

20 7. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-6, 16, 20-22 and 40 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

8. Applicant's arguments filed 05/28/2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues that there is no evidence to the posting date of Adobe reference.

With respect to Applicant's argument that no evidence has been given for the 5 posting date of the Adobe reference, the Adobe reference (i.e. "Adobe Acrobat 5.0 User's Guide for Chambers") is relied upon merely as evidence that the Adobe Acrobat 5.0 software had the functionality as relied upon to teach the claim limitations. The Adobe Acrobat 5.0 software was released prior to the applicant's filing date and therefore qualifies as prior art.

10

Conclusion

9. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP
§ 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37
15 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the 20 shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
